BICOM[®]

Bioresonance Therapy

Better and quicker diagnosis

Painless therapy without medication

Dear Reader

Have you ever asked yourself why, despite our affluence and the incredible scientific advances made by man, more and more people are suffering from chronic disorders – and not just adults and older people, but more and more children too?

This is the reason why we have been looking for ways which enable new approaches to be made in diagnosis and therapy:
The BICOM Bioresonance Therapy.

Bioresonance therapy belongs to the category of empiric medicine such as homeopathy, acupuncture and other natural healing methods and has been used for more than 25 years in human medicine.

Our aim is to help you as best and quickly as possible.

On the following pages this brochure is designed to give you information on the reasons for chronic health disorders and to introduce you to the BICOM Bioresonance Therapy. Perhaps by this route you will have the opportunity especially for your complaints to find out the not yet discovered causes of your health problems and have them treated accordingly. Have a look through this brochure and let us know if you would like any further information.

With best wishes for a healthy future

Your BICOM therapist

What is BICOM[®] Bioresonance Therapy?

BICOM Bioresonance is a special diagnostic and therapy procedure which has paved the way for a whole new approach to medicine. The basic principles of bioresonance therapy are confirmed by the latest findings in quantum mechanics¹ and biophysics, however, they have not yet been accepted by the present doctrine.

In many cases it is possible to use the BICOM device to ascertain the actual, but often concealed causes of disorders.

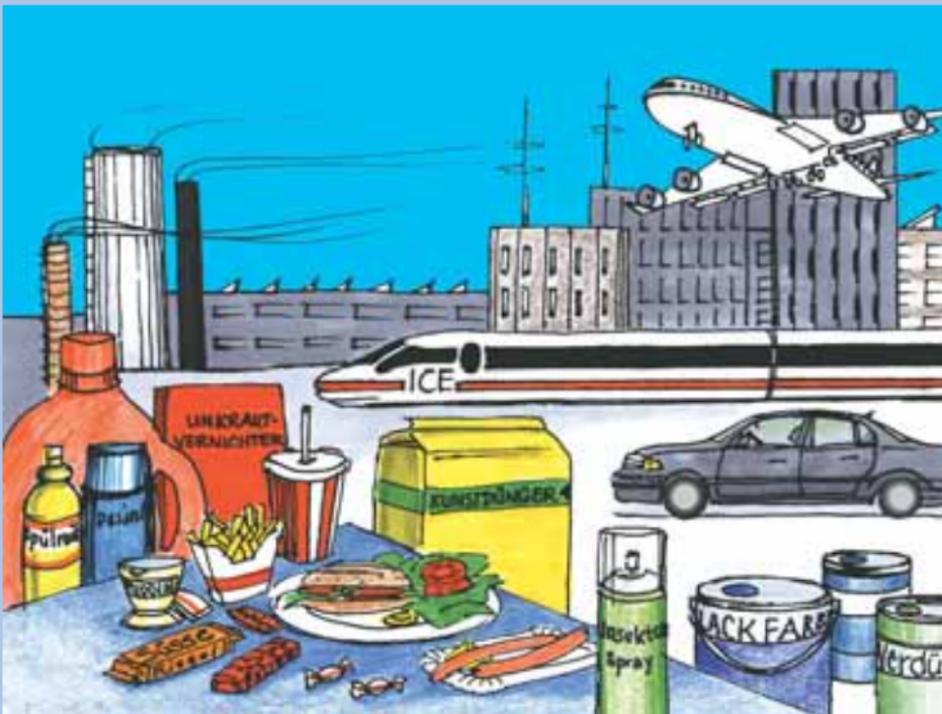

Bioresonance therapy is a gentle therapy without any medicines.

¹ Definition of quantum mechanics: Quantum mechanics deals with the particle and wave properties of atoms and the interaction between them. Quant: smallest particle (e.g. of energy: energy quant)

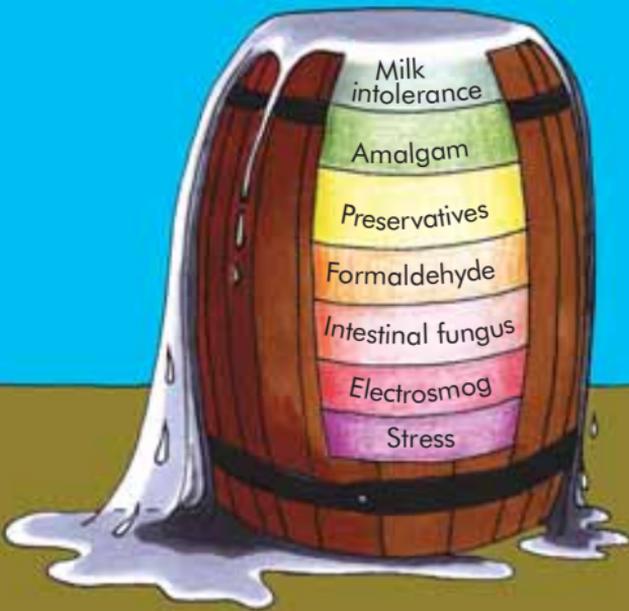

Background to chronic disorders

We live in an affluent society

Today we live in an affluent society. A whole range of technical appliances, unbelievably quick means of transport and communication, countless chemical substances and any number of ready meals make our everyday lives that much easier. As much as we enjoy all this, more and more of us are now paying a considerable price for it.

When it all gets too much

A number of stresses affect people today: chemical additives in our food and drinking water, environmental toxins, radiation stresses, countless chemical substances, the use of medicines in livestock breeding, etc.

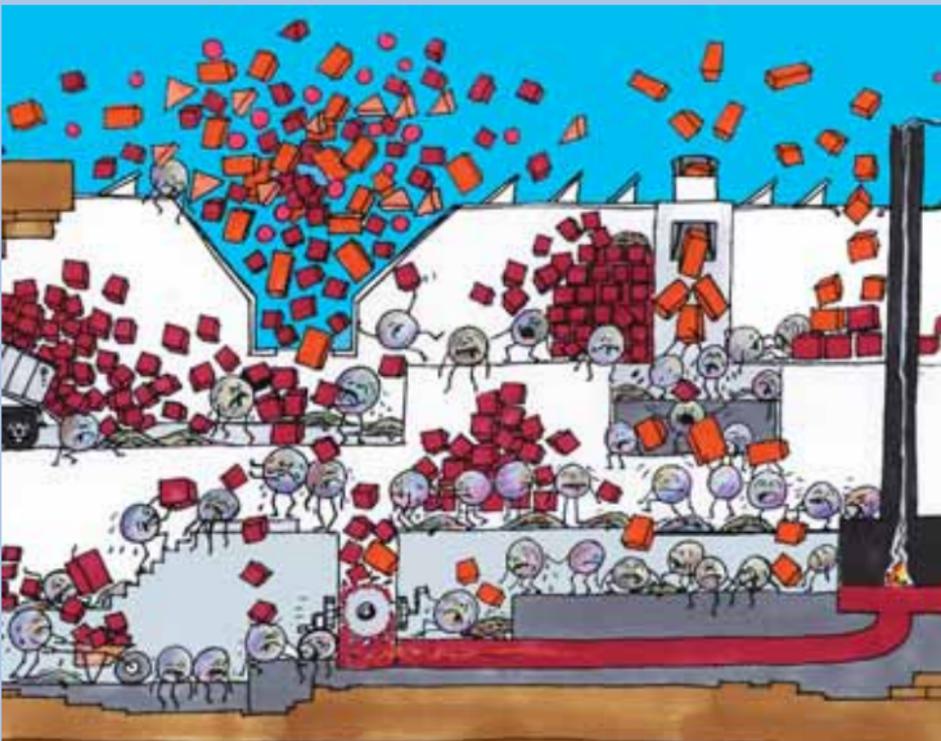

These stresses can become all too much for some patients. We see the result is in the form of non-specific disturbances to wellbeing, chronic fatigue or even serious physical disturbances.

It is interesting to discover that in patients with the same clinical picture, there are often completely different underlying causes. Unfortunately, it is not always possible using conventional means to pinpoint these different, highly individual causes.

Chronic, numerous or long-lasting stresses can put too much pressure on the body's ability to heal itself

As a general rule, the body has very good self-healing powers. The body possesses a phenomenal regulation system which can even help to restore equilibrium over and over again in response to unusual influences acting on the body.

If the body experiences too many or too serious chronic stresses over a prolonged period this can impede or even block the body's regulatory ability as well as its self-healing powers.

Major new findings in technology have led to astounding advances which are now being applied to medicine

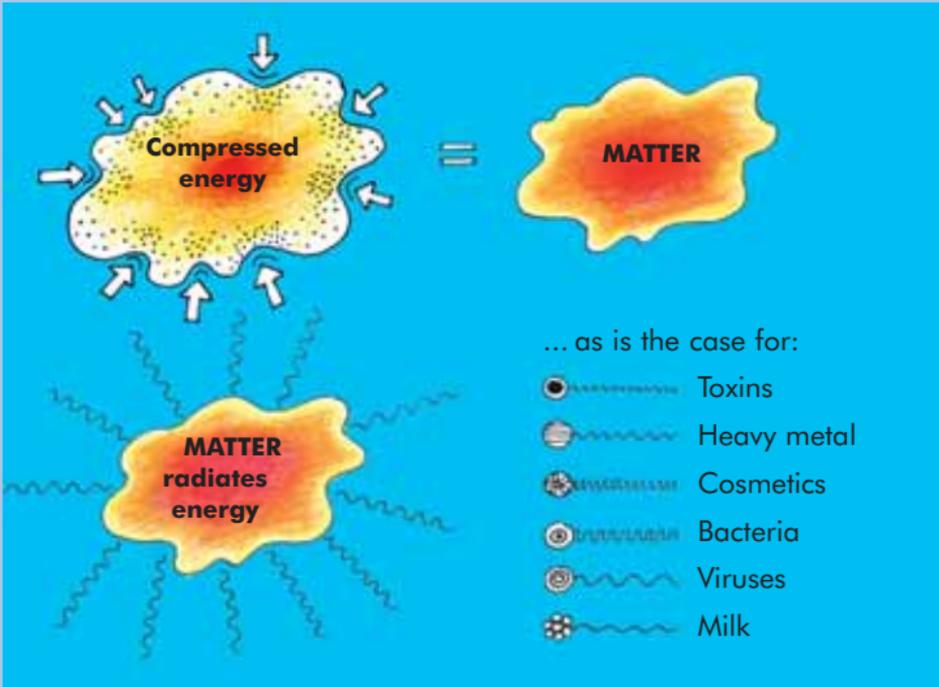

Nowadays we can receive images through the air and can speak to each other thousands of miles apart. In other areas too we see rapid technological advances. Findings from the area of biophysics and quantum mechanics have opened up amazing possibilities and have led to impressive developments in technology.

Such findings are useful to explain the basis of bioresonance therapy.

Learn more about this on the following pages.

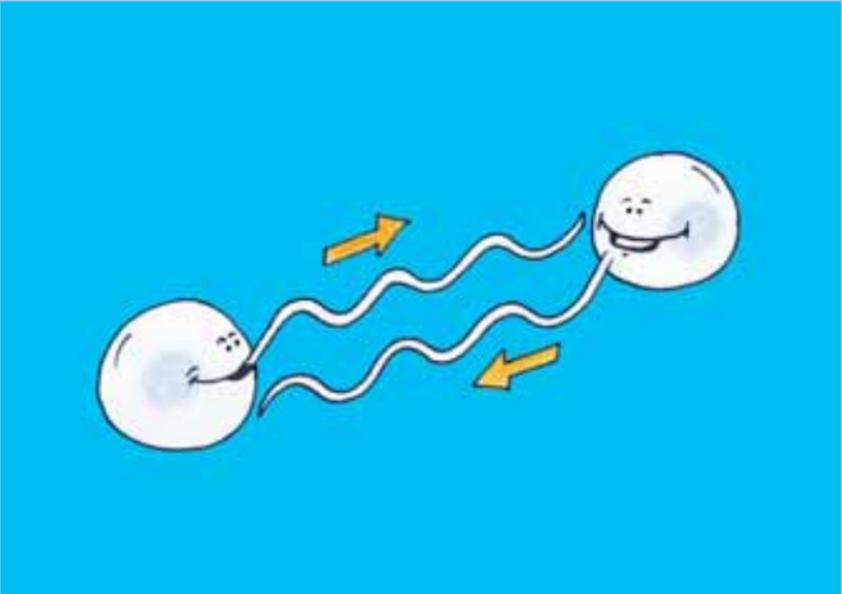

Every form of matter is made up of energy and also emits this energy

Matter is compressed energy and emits energy.

Every substance and therefore every cell, every part of the body but also viruses, bacteria, pollen etc. emit energy and therefore have a highly specific, typical wavelength or frequency with an entirely individual characteristic. This is also termed the frequency pattern.

Cells communicate with each other

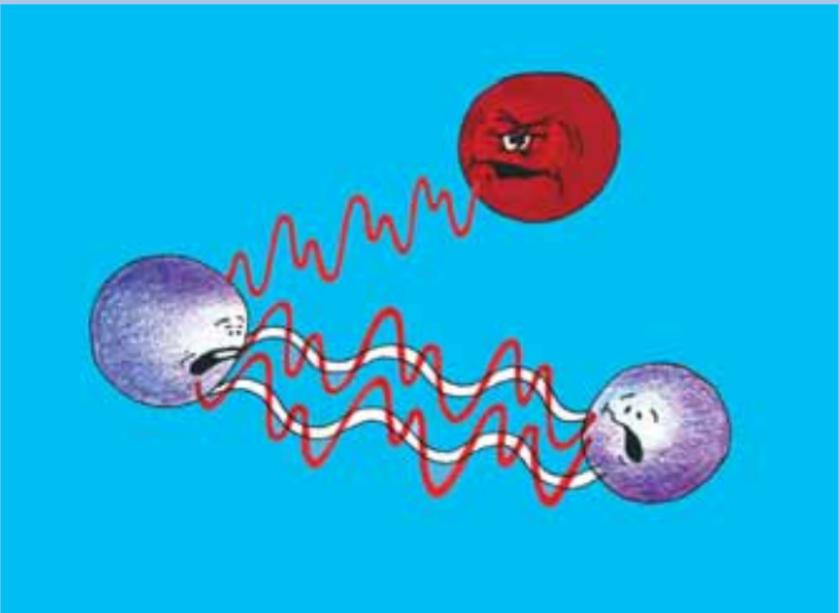

We live in an age of communication and information and it is time we faced up to the fact that the body can only function and regulate itself because communication and therefore an exchange of information takes place between the various cells in the body. It has since been proven that cells communicate with each other by means of "flashes of light". They exchange information via certain frequencies.

In a healthy body this exchange of information functions unhindered. Each cell or part of the body can fulfil its task.

Stress-inducing influences or substances can impede communication between cells

If interfering substances (toxins, viruses, bacteria, etc.) or stress-inducing radiation are able to affect the body, their disruptive frequency patterns can in turn impede communication between cells.

Disturbed cell communication can result in organic (physical) changes

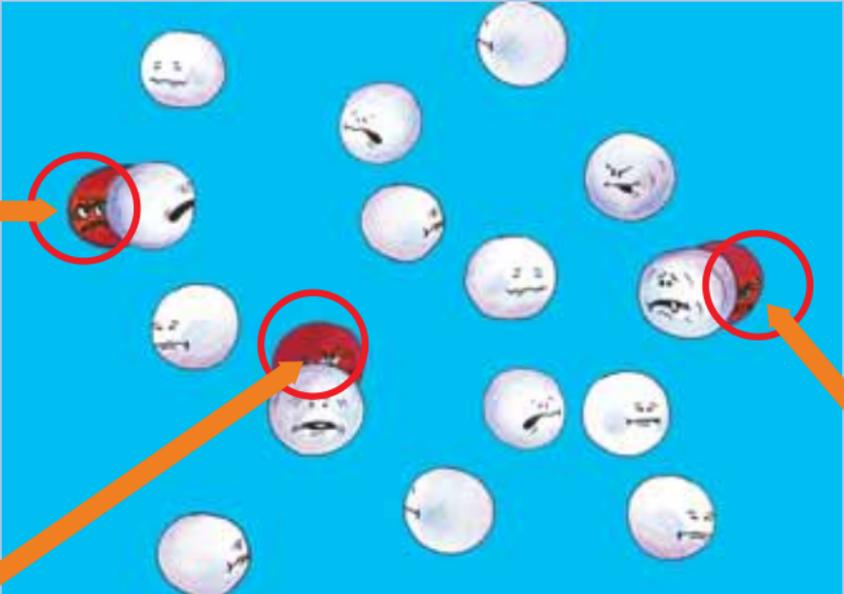

If communication between cells is disturbed, this will of course prevent those cells from functioning properly and we see evidence of this to varying degrees through non-specific disturbed wellbeing, physical exhaustion, chronic fatigue and later through organic changes and related symptoms as well.

Symptoms frequently occur where a weakness is already present, often genetic.

Diagnosis using BICOM Bioresonance:

Stresses can be determined individually and precisely

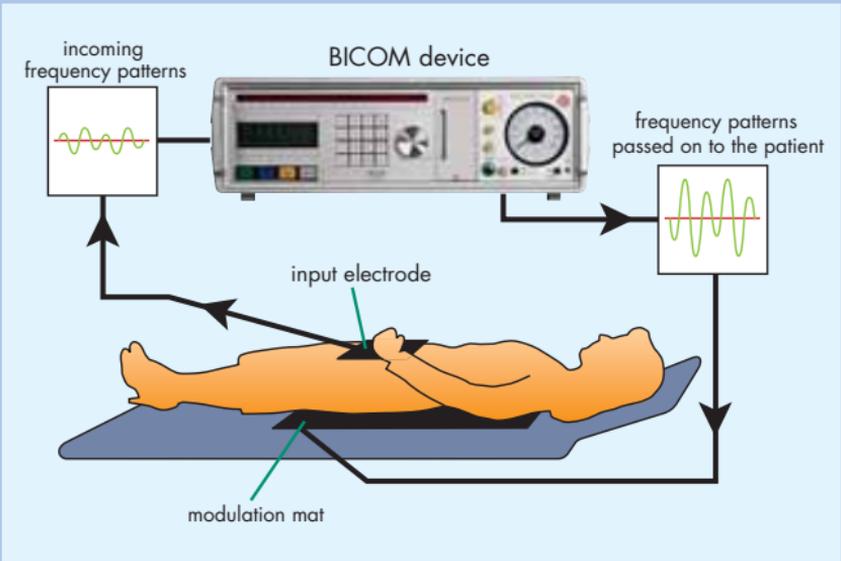

A human being is 65 % water. This liquid not only serves as a nutrient medium for the cell but also for a waste deposit for stressing substances in case that it all gets too much for the elimination organs such as liver, gall, kidney, intestine, etc. Unfortunately it is not easy for laboratory methods to access this region.

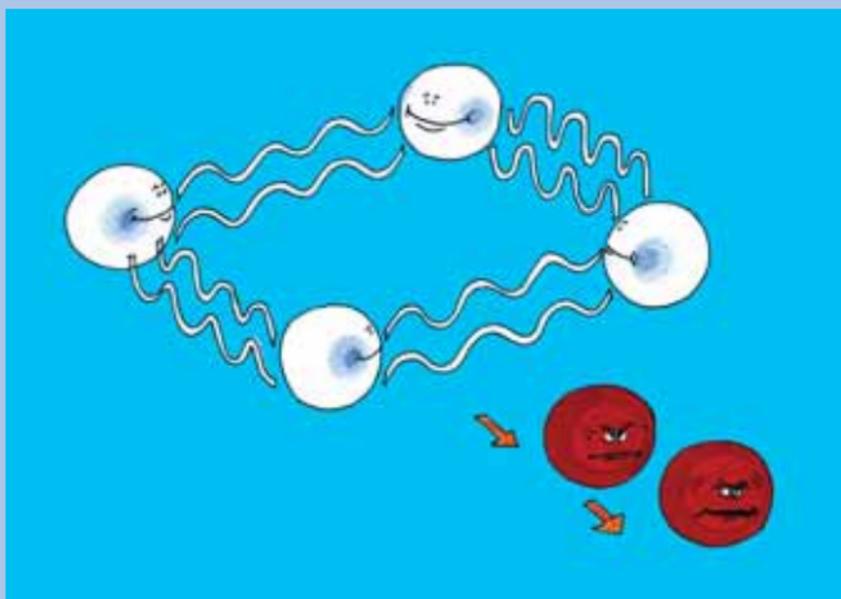

With the BICOM device the typical frequency patterns of substances can be recorded and their effect on the patient's body determined. This is carried out very quickly and entirely painlessly. Consequently, it is possible in many cases to discover which stresses are making the patient ill (e.g. bacteria, viruses, electrosmog, dental materials, allergens etc.).

BICOM® Bioresonance Therapy:

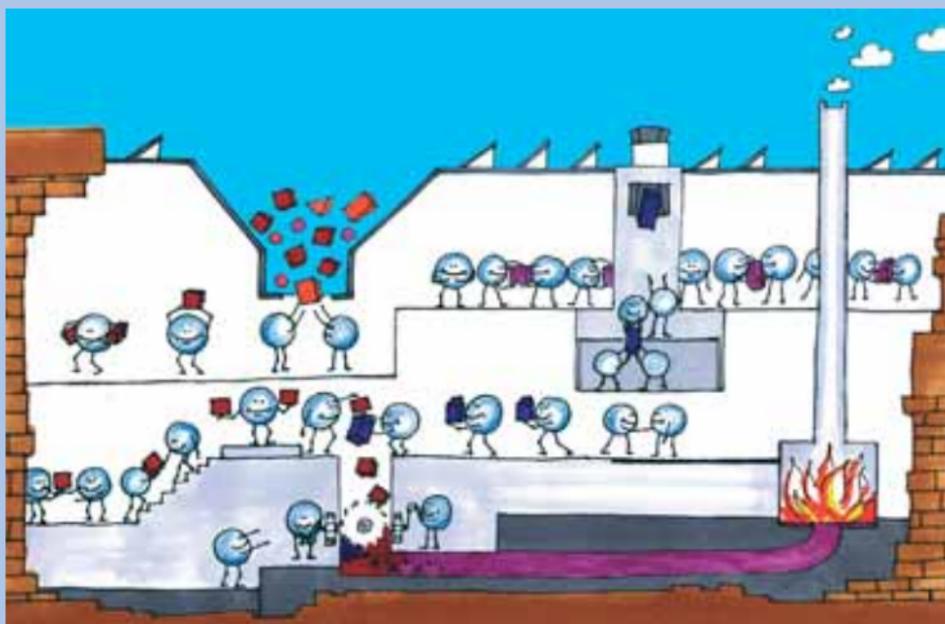

The found stresses are treated with the appropriate frequency patterns

The body's own regulatory system is considerably supported and stimulated by the BICOM Bioresonance Therapy

The communication among the cells is unhindered and stressing substances can be set free and eliminated.

Bioresonance Therapy program

1. Diagnosis

With a special, painless test procedure the therapist finds out whether any intolerances are present, whether certain organs are weakened or whether toxic substances are having negative effects on the body, etc. As a result, the often underlying causes of complaints can in many cases be discovered very quickly.

2. Treatment

In most cases an individual treatment plan is drawn up and possible complementary measures discussed.

During treatment with the BICOM device the electrodes are placed on the patient who sits or lies down in a relaxed position. A treatment session usually lasts between five and 30 minutes. Treatment should be a pleasant experience and is completely painless.

The aim of the treatment is to reduce those influences causing the illness in order to activate the communication in the body.

The number of treatments depends on various factors. Please inform your therapist if you experience any changes in how you feel.

Cost of treatment

As the number of treatments depends on different factors (such as seriousness of the clinical picture, how long the complaints are existing, etc.) you should ask your therapist how many treatment sessions you are likely to need and how much a session costs.

What can you do to effectively support your Bioresonance treatments?

During the entire period of treatment drink plenty of water with a low mineral content – 1½ to 2 litres a day! Only water with a low mineral content can eliminate the damaging substances removed from your body by the therapy and therefore it is the ideal detoxification drink.

Do not drink any coffee or alcohol for at least six hours before and after each therapy session!

It is recommended not to eat pork during the whole course of the treatment as this affects your lymph system.

Also, eat as little sugar as possible. Sugar damages the intestinal bacteria and also actively encourages many of the disorders associated with the intestine.

Tiredness following therapy, hot flushes or chills or slight perspiration are all reactions to the therapy and usually subside fairly quickly.
